I. DEFINITION

An international exchange student is a non-degree-seeking international student who studies at Stockton University according to a written agreement between Stockton University and their home institution outside of the U.S. The maximum duration of an international exchange student studying at Stockton University is 12 months inclusive of academic training. An international exchange student usually holds the J-1 exchange student visa.

Degree-seeking undergraduate international student admission will follow Procedure 3611 Undergraduate International Student Admissions.

II. ADMISSION PROCESS

A. Nomination

International exchange students who are interested in studying at Stockton University should be nominated by their home institutions to the Office of Global Engagement by October 15 to be admitted in the following spring semester and March 15 to be admitted in the following fall semester, or a different date listed in the signed MOU or MOA.
