GALLOWAY TWP--Campaign appearances and a new straw poll have political experts talking about the governor running for the oval office.

Governor Chris Christie has spent the last month on the campaign trail. He's using his political capital to bolster support for conservatives running for the governor's office in other states.

Like Pennsylvania gubernatorial candidate Tom Corbett. And in Iowa Christie has stumped for former governor, Terry Branstad who is running against a Democratic challenger.

His recent campaign speeches has some political pundits speculating about a possible run for president in 2012. And a recent TEA Party Straw Poll in Virginia favors Governor Christie over party favorite, former Alaska Governor, Sarah Palin. Christie has repeatedly expressed he has no interest in running.

Congressman LoBiondo says in just a short amount of time the governor has
