Despite news conferences and press releases from governors and lawmakers over the years, little has been done to regulate the flow of contributions from businesses that also hold local government because such contracts are not uniformly monitored.

Harry Pozycki, founder of Metuchen-based nonprofit watchdog The Citizens Campaign, agreed the current state of local pay-to-play reform — in which counties and municipalities basically write their own rules — was not acceptable.

“What we need is a comprehensive local law,” he said.

“We have one in the Legislature — it’s just that the governor and leaders of the legislature have to have the will to make this
