The afternoon sessions will begin with addresses by NJDEP Commissioner Bob Martin (invited) and Assistant Commissioner Jane Kozinski. Members of three panels will follow with discussions of the current state of recycling in New Jersey, new technologies and innovations, and a look back at the events and people whose work established New Jersey as an environmental leader with the April 1987 passage of the New Jersey Statewide Mandatory Source Separation and Recycling Act.

An informal dinner reception will follow the afternoon panels. The day will culminate with a keynote address by Governor Kean. The cost to attend is $55. To see the agenda or to register click here.
